

Genetics-informed primary care.

OriginalMD is the practice of Patrick Long, MD: primary care for adults that integrates family medicine and clinical genetics in one physician, with a small panel, extended visits, and direct physician access.

What integrated primary and genetic care provides

- One physician, trained in both family medicine and clinical genetics, provides the full scope of primary care and is the same physician ordering and interpreting your genetic testing.
- Extended visits and a small panel: a 60- to 90-minute initial appointment that concludes with a diagnostic and treatment plan developed with you, and direct physician access with no front desk or phone tree.
- A single plan, revised over time as your health changes and as the interpretation of your genetic findings is updated, with particular depth in Ehlers-Danlos syndrome, rare and inherited conditions, and cases that remain undiagnosed.

How visits are structured

Consultation: initial and follow-up

Dedicated time on a defined clinical question, addressed across family medicine and clinical genetics, concluding with a specific diagnostic and management plan. Relevant prior records provided in advance are evaluated before the visit.

Membership

A continuing partnership with your physician. Scope, structure, and cost are defined after an initial consultation.

Continuity visit

For patients Dr. Long has treated previously. The first visit at OriginalMD is a continuity visit, at which we update your history and treatment plan, address current concerns, and decide together whether membership is the right fit.
